FOR ANNEXATION

Portion of Debate in House of Representatives.

On the Day Previous to Vote Eight Hours Were Given Up to Discussion.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Eight hours, comprising the afternoon and evening sessions of the House today, were devoted to debate of the Newlands resolution for the annexation of Hawaii. Twenty speeches were delivered, most of them being brief. A vote will be taken at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and in order to give time for speeches which members desire to make, the House agreed to meet at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The resolution, according to estimates today, will receive, with the exception of not more than twelve, all the Republican votes and will enlist the support of from fifteen to twenty Democrats and members of other parties.

A few private bills were disposed of and the Hawaiian debate proceeded. Grosvener (R.) of Ohio was recognized first, and, in introducing his remarks, said the pending question was not for party politics, and he would not appeal to any of his Republican colleagues who might oppose annexation to go contrary to their convictions and support annexation as a party project.

Arguing for the constitutionality of the proposed annexation, he contended the power to annex was given to Congress in the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution. Replying to the claim that Hawaii is unnecessary as a naval or commercial point in Pacific transit because Oonalaska, on the Aleutians, now an American possession, is a route 800 miles shorter than the Honolulu route, Grosvener presented a letter from Commodore Melville, in which he said, while the Oonalaska route was the shorter, the dense and long-continued fogs, the ice floes and storms at and off Oonalaska and the absence of commerce in the Aleutians made the northern route unsafe and unprofitable for merchants and passenger ships.

Proceeding, he touched lightly the suggestion that American labor, with its vigor, intelligence and energy, would be affected by the slight competition which it would meet at the hands of the Asiatics in the Hawaiian Islands. Grosvener said he advocated the resolutions upon a ground entirely separated from any war emergency. He saw in the near future a wonderful development in the commerce of the East, and in order to provide for the Western part of the country to secure a just and profitable share in that wealth of commerce, "this half-way house upon the highway of the Pacific" was essential.

Richardson (D.) of Tennessee followed in opposition to the pending measure, laying down the general proposition that only self-interest should be considered in contemplating any step affecting the Government, and from that point of view alone would he treat annexation. Richardson said he was a firm believer in the Monroe doctrine, and wanted its integrity to be preserved, but he was convinced that annexation would be a step that would end unavoidably in the abandonment of the doctrine.

Cochran (D.) of Missouri, in a speech replete with comparisons with policies of the countries of Europe, argued in advocacy of colonization, not of conquest. Failure to annex these islands, Cochran said, would be to invite war, for in five years, left to the present condition of population, the Government of Hawaii would be revolutionized, and in five years the country given over to pagan control. The Philippine islands formed an entirely different proposition, and he protested vigorously against the foisting of that proposition at this time to strangle a righteous issue.

Howard (D.) of Georgia, in a speech occupying more than an hour, opposing the resolutions, elaborated on the principal arguments advocated by the opposition and devoted much time to a careful review of American diplomatic relations with Hawaii. He denominated the dominant Government in Hawaii as the "Government of sugar, for sugar, and by sugar."

The only hope of the anti-annexationists in the Senate is to break a quorum. That they cannot do, as indicated last night, and there is gloom in the anti-annexation camp tonight.

LOST SOME COAL.

Monterey Drops Part of Her Deck Load Overboard.

SAN DIEGO, June 10.—The Monterey and her coal consort, the Brutus, arrived off the harbor at 3 p. m. today and separated, the Brutus going about five miles south and anchoring near the Coronado Islands, while the Monterey came in and dropped anchor at 4 p. m. off the coal bunkers. A cutter came ashore at once bringing Paymaster Rogers who said that nothing was the matter with machinery or crew. It was then learned that on the second day out the Monterey lost 83 tons of her deck load of coal overboard.

Captain Leutze stated that the coal was lost about thirty miles outside of the Farallones, the netting giving away from repeated batterings of the waves in heavy weather. It was then decided to come south and, after reloading at San Diego, start afresh for Honolulu. The captain stated that the trip from here would be much smoother and quicker, as they would have the trade winds with them all the way to Honolulu and avoid the boisterous gales on the northern route.

SAN DIEGO, June 11.—The Monterey sailed at 12:45 p. m. today for Honolulu. The Monterey commenced taking on coal at 4 a. m., the men at the bunkers having worked all night filling the lighters with the dusky "diamonds," which were carefully inspected by the officers as the coal was rapidly stowed on board. Water and fresh provisions were added to the 150 tons of coal taken as a deckload, and all were securely stored at 10 o'clock this morning.

A Model Plant is not complete without Electric Power, thus dispensing with small engines.

Why not generate your power from one CENTRAL Station? One generator can furnish power to your Pump, Centrifugals, Elevators, Pumps, Railways and Hoists; also, furnish light and power for a radius of from 15 to 30 miles.

Electric Power being used, saves the labor of hauling coal in your field, also water, and does away with high-priced engineers, and only have one engine to look after in your mill.

Where water power is available it costs nothing to generate Electric Power.

THE HAWAIIAN ELECTRIC COMPANY is now ready to furnish Electric Plants and Generators of all descriptions at short notice, and also has on hand a large stock of Wire, Chandeliers and Electrical Goods.

All orders will be given prompt attention, and estimates furnished for Lighting and Power Plants; also, attention is given to House and Marine Wiring.
